There is work this letter of Sunday last, as note from Mr Adam, suggesting a possibility of his address, [illegible] at the fair, if made into a pamphlet from the broken columns after Sent. in Standard. I consulted Garrison, who advised against it, & this coincides with my own judgement. The bumps at the last board meeting, was a report from the Sub-Committee upon the Office &c. In our shortness of funds, Mr Phillips had given Wm Hill, the young colored man who is Sub-Lieutenant there, a month's warning. His salary is 350 pr ann. I believe, a thereabouts, & H. W. W. did not deny that he could do all the work with the exception of carrying round the papers, but Frank Phillips declared that, if he could not get done for $1. for work he would carry himself or beat the scheme himself. But alas— reduction of salary or dismissal of supernumeraries always does more harm to the other interests of the cause by occasioning misunderstandings, than the reduction of expense does good to the pecuniary interests. The cold people were ready to H. Organize about it, (of course only the less sensible & most selfish) & Slayer might make a great handle of it, we heard, in getting votes for Liberty Party in Belmont St. The matter was left undecided. I went for Rufus Hall, for various reasons, too tedious to recapitulate. The next thing was an appeal from Dow & Jackson printers, who, having done all the printing necessary to burn about the second advent & the world obstinately refusing to kindle, had determined to become booksellers

V applied to Philbrick for a lease of half of our office at 25 Cornhill. We pay 300 or thereabouts I never can remember figures. & to get a lease which we could underlet, were obliged to pay more. They offered us for the Counter Sale — the best 2 things — such a rent that we had only 50 for ourselves to pay for all our privileges, which were to include the Sign-Room the full half of the show boards at the door, & Every other square of the window. (Those I artfully for being all I conceived to be of any great consequence) (It amused me to read James's letters, at the time of the ascertainment of our respective functions, in which he seemed to suppose that we wanted the nomination of the under clerk at Nassau St, for the purpose of earning on a book-business.) A mile shot for head quarters is all we want — length for the sole of a vigorous hand's foot (excuse haste.) Well — Dow & Jackson came in with all their quills & ledgers, inkstands & red-tape — advertised in the Lit. Signed their lease — Sold next to nothing the first two days — packed up & moved off — Sundry times a had situations for business, thought themselves basely treated by Philbrick that he would not let them off & appealed to the board, & the board voted to refer it to such arbitrators as the parties command themselves agree upon. Garrison ~~voted~~ recommended to leave it entirely to them (Dow & Jackson) decision. I, for once, stood by both Philbrick. 'The business of the world is conducted on Rascally principles' argued Garrison.' 'Ay,' said I 'but ~~it's~~ who does the Lord receive to his holy hill?" "We must do as we would be done by' said Garrison." "I would seem to wish in my heart that any body should do by me as Dow & Jackson are asking ~~me~~ to do by them." "But we may rely upon their generosity." I cant rely at all upon the man that fails to keep his word." "But its a bad bargain for them." "Had it been so for us, should we have been justified in breaking it?" "But the people who were to have furnished them with stock have disappointed them." "does their disappointment of us, justify us in throwing back
